SUMMIT OF MOUNT BAKER.

A Frisk Among Peaks, Is the Great Tableland.

There is no evidence of recent activity of this volcano, nor are there any alarming indications that it will ever be active again. The forest and streams true, the lava is live vents on the sides of the volcano where the vapors and sulphur are continually emitted, where the lava is still hot and steam jets issue with rumbling and violence, but the snows of recurring seasons have blanketed it for centuries, as if to smother out the internal fires, and it can hardly be considered now more than the lingering of heat which once warmed the surrounding regions to fluorescence, the base of the mountain to bright red, and where it is now buried under a mantle of perpetual snow its summit once shone with a luminous glare whiter than the electric arc. But the frisk among peaks in this interesting region is the tableland already referred to.

It rose in its magnificence and grandeur from the bowels of the earth as did Mount Baker, of which it is simply part and parcel. It probably rose to its present eminence above its surroundings and especially out of its immediate bed of porphyry somewhat later after it had cooled enough to hold its shape by renewed pressure directly under it, shoving it up like a cork out of a bottle.

The writer was strongly inclined to take the plug clear out and look inside to see exactly what was the cause of it. There is much evidence that the secondary uplift came at a much later day than the volcanic eruption or eruptions which produced the main features of this district, the most important of these evidences being the fact that the denudation about the vertical walls of this tableland is very much less than about the sides of any other cliffs around, irrespective of height, position or material to be eroded.

The walls of it are crumbling.

away and accumulating about the base in rock slides, somewhat faster on the sunny sides. If it were possible to count the annual layers of rock on these slides, which have flaked off the walls above by the action of the summer sun and frosts of winter, like the age of trees by the rings of growth, it would be easy to determine when Mazanum dome last made a move to rival Coleman peak or get in better view of the parent cone.

Proof of Property

The teacher had found a lead pencil on the floor of the school-room.

"Children," she asked, holding it up, "does this belong to any of you?"

"For several seconds there was no answer, then a little girl timidly raised her hand.

"Is it yours, Bessie?" said the teacher.

"Yes'm."

"You are sure of it, are you?"

"How do you recognize it?"

"I don't like to tell."

"But you will have to tell or I can't let you have it."

"I recognize it, teacher, by the way it's sharpened. If it wasn't sure enough mine, I'd be mighty clear of owning' up to such a job as that."

Bessie got her pencil.—Chicago Tribune

An Effective Retort

The late Rev. Patrick Watson, vicar of Earsfield, was a great authority on the Holy Land and he was also a stickler for accuracy. An amusing passage of arms once took place between him and the archbishop of Canterbury. A committee port was used in a conversation and Mr. Watson objected to the heading. Removal of premises on the ground that the things inside the premises were removed out of the building.

Mr. Watson said: "I suspect you mean to say that the things inside the building were removed out of the building."

The archbishop said: "The things inside the building were removed out of the building."

Mr. Watson said: "The things inside the building were removed out of the building."

MIGHT END ILLUSIONS.

If Every One Might Do Only the Work He Liked Best

"I wonder," said the professor, "how things would work out if a magic wand should be waved over the world, permitting every Tom, Dick and Harry of us to engage in the occupation he especially likes. Pretty nearly everybody would hasten to make a change, I fancy. It would be interesting to note both general and individual results."

"I have a friend who is a broker—a successful broker, I should imagine, because by his advice I have been able to increase my modest capital—but, bless you, he is satisfied with being a broker. Far from it. If he could do just what he wanted he would follow the sea. I am not sure in just what capacity, but probably as the captain of a transatlantic liner. Conversely, I know a seafaring man the height of whose ambition is to establish himself on shore, the master of a little farm. A woman acquaintance of mine who is making quite a name for herself as a writer cherishes the longing to go into settlement work. And so it goes. Speaking for myself, I can say that while I have been happy as an instructor of youth, I feel that what talents I possess might have been more profitably employed in selling. Yes, you may smile but in my earlier days I had the wanderlust and even now my favorite dream is of the exploits of men who have been able to get away from the confines of civilization and report what they have found."

It is as if most of us had what I may call second selves, whose imaginary careers are far different from those that, as a matter of fact, are the ones experienced. Would there be more happiness if the imaginary achievements were the ones? We are apt to think so. The chances are that disillusionment would come as it does frequently in our actual callings. At any rate we can now think of the joy of the might have been—and that is something.—New York Press

The Size of the Sea

The Pacific covers 68,000,000 the Atlantic 30,000,000 and the Indian ocean, Arctic and Antarctic, 42,000,000 square miles.

To stow away the contents of the Pacific it would be necessary to fill a tank one mile long, one mile wide and one mile deep every day for 440 years. Put in figures, the Pacific holds in weight 948,000,000,000,000,000 tons. It would take about 1,000,000 years for all its water to pass over the falls of Niagara.

The average depth of the Atlantic is not quite three miles. Its waters weigh 325,000,000,000,000,000 tons, and a tank to contain it would have each of its six sides 4.0 miles long. The figures of the other oceans are in the same startling proportions. It would take all the sea water in the world about 2,000,000 years to flow over Niagara. A tank to hold it all would have to measure nearly 1,000 miles along each of its sides.

Show a Bad Example

A grocer who was noted for his carefulness had an advertisement inserted in a local newspaper for a message boy and a young fellow who understood the kind of a gentleman who was advertising came to apply for the situation, and while the grocer was telling him how careful he must be a fly settled on a bag of sugar, and the grocer caught it and threw it away. The boy then said:

"If you want me to be careful you are showing me a bad example."

"Why?" replied the former.

"Because," said the boy, "you have thrown that fly away without brushing the sugar off its feet."—London Mail.

Be Not Afraid

He has not learned the lesson of his life who does not every day surmount a fear. If you have no faith in a beneficent power above you, but see only an adamantine fate coiling its folds about nature and man, then reflect that the best use of fate is to teach us courage. If you have no confidence in any foreign mind, then be brave because there is always one good opinion which must always be of importance to you—namely, your own.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

PARISIN DUELS.

There Are Three Kinds—Tricks to Gain Time Will Be Used

Duels are common everywhere in France nowadays, but they are robbed of their picturesque character by the House of Lords. A man who has been defeated in a duel is not allowed to fight again. The duel is a serious business, and the duelists are not allowed to use tricks to gain time. The duel is a serious business, and the duelists are not allowed to use tricks to gain time.

Of those due to an ill considered or ill bred man, comparatively few come to a serious end. The duel is a serious business, and the duelists are not allowed to use tricks to gain time. The duel is a serious business, and the duelists are not allowed to use tricks to gain time.

The materials for disagreement are rarely a right to a duel, and the duel is a serious business, and the duelists are not allowed to use tricks to gain time. The duel is a serious business, and the duelists are not allowed to use tricks to gain time.

Neither of the gentlemen knew quite how it was all about, but the seconds said it was all in the end, so he had to go through with it, and the duel was done. The third duel was a serious and very serious one. It usually takes the form of a row about a lady.

There are a good many tricks to be used in dueling. Dropping the sword is one, resting the point on the ground or making a wide parry to scrape the ground with another. It is either of these or the point has to be sandpapered and treated with an anti-catch. In a flame, so that there may be no risk of a wound being poisoned.

With pistols the conditions are arranged according to the seriousness of the quarrel. As a rule, dueling pistols at twenty five paces are used. The dueling pistol is muzzle loaded and rifled. Its pull off is regulated by the circumstances, also the powder charge. Seconds often arrange to put in only sufficient powder to drive the bullet out of the bore. Sometimes they drop the bullet into the left hand when loading and hammer an imaginary one down the barrel.

A strain of tradition of the chances of war is found in the fact that the American army at Cambridge during the war of the Revolution would have been left without ammunition but for the provision of John Brown, a merchant of Providence R. I. and one of the family who have a right to the universality of the place. Brown was a very wealthy merchant and was the first of the Rhode Island merchants to send his ships to China and the East Indies. Anticipating the war he instructed his captains on the return voyage to load their ships with powder which he furnished to the army when its supply had been restricted to less than four rounds to each man.

ALMSGIVING.

The Law in Europe at One Time Made It a Crime

The secretary of the London Mendicity society reports that street begging is on the increase. He has statistics to prove his words, of course, but he claims that indiscriminate almsgiving is a crime.

It is interesting to recall that a code of European law in force for centuries did actually make almsgiving a crime, always punished severely, with death in certain cases. But this was 1,000 years ago, before the dawn of our happy civilization. It must be confessed, however, that there was an appearance of common sense about the famous Graec code, which ruled Norway, Iceland and much of England. It is in its time.

It is by laying down strict rules to make each family support its own indigent members or to show sufficient cause for the failure. This is the essential principle of a sound system of poor relief, which we have suffered to lapse under the direction of progress. Having thus provided for the respectable class of paupers, as it may be put briefly, the legislator could deal firmly with roving mendicants and their abettors. And he did.

It is worth while to observe, however, that the family pauper had a guardian or trustee, appointed by the district council, who was responsible for his decent subsistence. If this man did not fulfill his duty or tried to escape it he incurred the terrible penalty called exclusion—confinement in his house for three years. Any one who found him outside was free to kill him.

They stood no nonsense in those days. An able-bodied person who begged was outlawed—equivalent to a sentence of death. And any one proved to have been wandering for fifteen days without visible means of subsistence was held to be a beggar "within the meaning of the act" and treated accordingly. But the clause most interesting to us was that which decreed that any man, whatever his station, who gave money or money's worth to a vagrant, at the district assembly or on his way thither, should be punished with exclusion. The crime of almsgiving was well understood in those days. Perhaps I should add that the Graec code was officially promulgated in 1116. But it had been in force, as the preamble declares, for centuries.—Fall Mail Gazette

THE WEATHER

Fair tonight and Saturday light frost tonight.

"Sunshine always follows showers." Today is a beautiful verification of this old saying.

The Constitutional Amendment will be on a separate ticket. Don't forget this when you go to the poll.

If you haven't registered attend to it today and be sure to vote next Tuesday for Bryan and Kern.

Vote for the Bryan ticket electors and show that you are in favor of a white man's government in Alabama.

A double-header coming in with a freight train over the Central railroad yesterday evening, indicates heavy business and a return to normal conditions.

Only four more days until the election. The democrats claim that Bryan's chances are brightening every day, while the republicans pretend to feel sure that Taft will be the next president. The only thing left for the democrats to do is to vote the ticket and use every endeavor to induce others to follow their example.

Mr. Hearst says that John Temple Graves was never employed by him as an editor. What did Mr. Hearst carry John Temple to New York for? Did he only need him on the Independence party ticket? And what will Mr. Hearst do with the Atlanta editor after he has paid his socks bent off of him? These are some things that interest the friends of Mr. Graves.

The Atlanta city council, like many other similar bodies, find that they need some money to run the city government. It has been suggested, and a resolution will likely soon be offered, ordering the publication in pamphlet form, of the city's tax assessment list. The council think that not half the personal property in Atlanta is ever given in for taxes. The publicity item may be a good one. We shall watch the move and see what effect it has.

What Does It Mean?

If a vote for Taft doesn't mean a return of Republican rule in Alabama, with all its former corruption, what does it mean? It means also the carrying out of the Republican platform, as adopted at Chicago, where the 14th and 15th amendments of the Federal Constitution are fostered and their literal enforcement is demanded.

If you want the ballot replaced in the hands of the vicious negro in this state, a vote for Taft is a step in this direction.

If you desire social equality in our public schools; and if you wish our present laws governing railroads, whereby the races are separated by using different cars for whites and blacks, enough votes for Taft, will accomplish all these things, and many more just as objectionable. The final success of Mr. Taft's party in Alabama means just this and more. It means the final undoing of the negro with consequences too fearful to contemplate.

Voters, before you cast a Republican ballot in Alabama think of these things.

Following is an extract from a letter written by W. T. Hall and company's letter to stock and bonds and they are in the course of prices within the next two weeks upon the belief that the official factor will be paramount and that the holders of stocks will come in and lower certain of them as election day approaches.

Only reasons for declining to share in the prevailing optimism as to the course of the election are simple but undemocratic.

We are still in the throes of one of the worst industrial depressions through which this country has ever passed. In all previous instances the administration in power when a depression occurred was turned out so sufficient reason appears in our opinion why history should fail to repeat itself this year.

The cost of living has risen more rapidly in the last ten years than have wages and salaries. Hence not only are the thousands of unemployed suffering, but several millions of clerk, teachers, police, and other professions men and women who are disheartened and rebellious.

While both of the old political parties are all integrating the republican party appears to be in worse condition than in the democratic party. In many centers the republicans are split into bitterly hostile factions.

The republican party as a whole has too close a connection with obnoxious tariff protection and other trusts and monopolies to please many of its old adherents. This is not saying that the democratic party would not have had similar connections had it been in power nearly all of the time for 44 years. It is simply stating a fact.

The policy of the republican party in the Philippines as to publicity of campaign funds as to direct legislation and the initiative and referendum as to army and navy expenditures as to extravagance as to labor injunctions and above all else on the tariff question has alienated many voters.

These are the main reasons for thinking that the republican party is likely to fail badly at the coming election. On the other side we believe that Mr. Taft is by most best news man regarded as safer and more conservative than Mr. Bryan. We also believe that the republican party occupies by far the more popular position in the rapidly advancing temperance question. Again it is reasonably certain—although it is disputed by competent judges—that most men are now prosperous and fairly well satisfied with things.

Considering all the facts as best we can see, we see no reason in the conditions in the month of the election while Wall Street now delays. Besides the many straw votes taken by impartial newspapers in the doubt in states indicate something of the nature of a landslide toward the democratic candidate. We think that it will be found that republican defeat will show it all the more in the manufacturing states of the east and middle north than in the more directly agricultural sections of the west. Most men are now believe vote about as they feel—industrially and financially.

Thus while it appears from a consideration of the electoral votes of the last twelve years, next to impossible for Bryan to win, it may look very easy after the votes are counted.

'The Devil.'

'The Devil' is easily the greatest play of the century and there is little wonder that it has attracted so much attention wherever it has been presented this season. In New York there are two big productions running now and seats are selling in advance for both houses from six to eight weeks in advance.

This remarkable play was produced in Jacksonville for one week by the Mable Page Company to starting room at every performance. Mr. John B. Whitman created a sensation in the title role and he now heads the company put out by Manager Ritchie which will appear in Dothan on Monday night. Dothan is fortunate in being able to see this great play while it is still new in this country and the house should be crowded on the occasion of its presentation here.

How to Know the Trade
There is an auctioneer whose 'gift of the gab' and native wit draw many purchasers to his sales. But sometimes says the Springfield Republican, he is the subject rather than the cause of amusement. The man's name is O. A. Kelley. Not long ago he had to sell among other things a lot of pine logs and the day before the sale he went over them and marked the end of each log with his initials. On the day of the auction an Irishman came along and immediately marked the logs with the letters on them. O. A. K. he read loud enough for all round to hear. Begorra if it's not just like Kelley to do olive us into believing them pine logs are oak!

BENJAMIN WEST.

How the Great Painter Brought About a Revolution in Art

Before the days of the old masters, the artist did not expect any one to pay such prices for their pictures as for those of foreigners or even to buy anything but a portrait. What could I do with it? an English connoisseur is said to have replied to a gentleman who had asked him why he did not purchase a historical picture he greatly admired. "You surely would not have me hang up a modern English picture in my house unless it was a portrait."

The cause of this low estimate of English art may be seen in the facts mentioned by Mrs. Bell in her "Life and Works of Thomas Gainsborough." She says that the first attempt made in England to represent a modern historical event exactly as it occurred was made by Benjamin West in his famous picture of the "Death of Wolfe" exhibited in 1771.

Such was then the rage for mythological subjects that when it was rumored that West was painting a picture in which the actors were represented in modern costume George III, the archbishop of Canterbury and members of the Royal Academy declared that they would have nothing to do with the bold innovator.

Sir Joshua Reynolds and the archbishop visited West in his studio to urge him to clothe Popham and Erskine soldiers in the costume of antiquity. West refused saying that the event to be commemorated happened in the year 1758 in a region unknown to the Greeks and Romans and when no warriors who wore classical costume existed. His visitors went away, but returned when the picture was finished.

Reynolds seated himself before the picture, examined it for half an hour and then, rising, said to the archbishop: "West has conquered. He has treated the subject as it ought to be treated. I retract my objection. I now regard this picture will not only become popular, but will occasion a revolution in art."

The picture of the battle of Gainsborough, which had prevented the English artists from producing original pictures, was a portrait painted by Gainsborough, which represented their sisters as British and Captain Phaulk and the French, and the latter. One artist painted the portraits of a lady and daughter a Virtue and Beauty Sacrificing to Diana.

The Green Pearl

Absinth is a liquor prepared by steeping several herbs, especially unripe and wormwood, in alcohol for several days. It is greenish in color. It was introduced into France by soldiers stationed in Algeria between 1830 and 1850, for whom it had been prescribed as a febrifuge. Its indulgence becomes a habit like that of alcohol, opium, cocaine, etc. but its effects are more demoralizing than those of most liquors or drugs. Absinthism produces hallucinations and loss of mental balance without destroying the power of action. Its habitual use brings on tremors and paralysis in the arms especially, with epilepsy and delusional mania.

Singular and Feminine

Little Mabel had a great opinion of her father over the telephone, but she had never gone through the formalities necessary for calling him up.

At last, however, she wanted to do this, so she took the receiver from the hook.

"I want to speak to daddy," she shouted.

"Number, please," asked central in that calm, patiently resistant voice which is to be found only in telephone ladies.

"Singular," replied little Mabel, surprised at the question and proud of her knowledge of grammar.
